

Beauty is in eye of autistic youth with a point and shoot camera

By Vito Converse

IAN'S WORLD

Something "clicked" the moment Ian, (top right) who's autistic, began taking pictures only last Good Friday with a Canon PowerShot A540 with 7.1 megapixels. He has taken a shot of a wooden floor's nearly vertical lines interrupted only by a pair of pink slippers and his own toes peeking out at the top. "This has come up with the kind of shots that have shocked some of us even with years of training," said John Chao, his mentor and an advertising photographer.

AT 25, IAN LEARNED ONLY LAST month how to "point and shoot" with a digital camera, yet he has amazed many with the images he has captured through his lens—and through the invisible wall that exists between his world and theirs.

It's like something "clicked" the moment Ian, who has Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD), began taking snapshots like a boy who had found a new toy.

Ian's pictures, according to his mentor, photographer John Chao, suggest "a natural eye for composition and detail."

He has come up with "the kind of shots that have shocked some of us, even with years of training," said an advertising photographer John Chao, who is also a mentor and an advertising photographer.

'Shocked' Gordon laments 'travesty' of environmental zoning

By Tereza Ojeda, Inquirer General Editor and Dona Z. Paez, Inquirer Staff

THE CONSTRUCTION OF TWO HIGH-RISE CONDOMINIUM buildings by Korean shipbuilder Hanjin Heavy Industries & Construction Ltd. in the Subic bay forest came under fire yesterday from Sen. Richard Gordon, a former administrator of the Subic Bay Metropolitan Authority (SBMA).

A "shock" Gordon said the buildings were only the latest "travesty" done to the forested Subic bay since he was replaced by Peloteo Paez as SBMA administrator during the Estrada administration. The SBMA is the government agency that manages the

Subic Bay Freeport. "I would not have accommodated it," the senator said, adding that he would have insisted the Koreans to build the condominiums for their company staff in Chicago City—"so they could mix with the populace"—as in neighboring Italian provinces.

The size of the Hanjin condominium buildings is within the Subic Watershed Forest Reserve, a check by the SBMA showed.

Covering 14,000 hectares and used for by the US Navy until its pullout in 1992, the site was classified as protected by virtue of Proclamation No. 826, which then President Corason Aquino issued on June 15, 1992.

The reserve, located on the Marang, Marikina, side of the bay, was declared protected for "purposes of protecting, maintaining, or improving its water yield and providing a restraining mechanism for inappropriate forest exploitation and abusive land use."

An official of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources in Marikina said the proclamation had been amended, directing the move to 8,000 ha.

While the original proclamation had assigned executive control and administration of the area to the environment secretary, the SBMA has actually been managing it, the official said.

Gordon said the three-to-five-story buildings were just up had already been cleared of trees when Subic was still a US naval base.

Sleep more to slim down, scientists say

INSURE—AN EXTRA HOUR BEHIND the sheets at night might be the key to shedding excess weight and fighting obesity, according to recent research.

"More sleep could be the ideal way of stabilizing weight and obesity," said neuroscientist Karim Spiegel of Princeton's Institute, a leading expert on sleep and its effects on biological, medical and public health research.

While poor eating habits and lack of exercise clearly play a role in the global rise of obesity, recent data indicate that lack of sleep may also be a factor, and one that is often underestimated.

Cory's special rosary: Made by Lucia, blessed by Mary herself

DEPICTED with permission from "The Messenger of Divine Love" January-March 2008 issue with minor changes to fit the Inquirer style and for brevity.

MRS. CORASION AGUILO WAS PHILIPPINE president in 1985, she made an official visit to the Vatican on June 15th this year. That was a truly remarkable event in her life.

We were told that Pope John Paul II, as he read his message, departed from his text to tell Mrs. Aquino that she represented her the Filipino people's special love for Our Lady, and that he would have the special love (public answer to Maria) in her years as the leader of our land.

Surely, Mrs. Aquino has helped keep that love for Mary, Mother of Jesus, alive and ardent among our people through the years as a public figure. It is something she continues to do up to the present. She is, then, deeply "worthy of the Rosary." She is, then, deeply blessed by her motherly devotion to Our Blessed Mother, something very deep and

PDI bags Ifra awards: For infographics, Inquirer.net

THE PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER won the silver in the Best in Newspaper Infographics-Breaking News category at the 7th Annual Asia Media Awards held in Macao, China, last Wednesday.

In online edition, Inquirer.net, was given the Judges' Special Recognition award in the online mobile category.

Both awards are given to media groups with circulation of more than 100,000.

Inquirer.net executives, who were in Macao for the event, said their award was a sign that online journalism had finally achieved recognition in the region.

"The Philippine online journalism and online journalism in general, it's a sign that the discipline has arrived," said JF Ruffin, editor in chief of Inquirer.net.

"It certainly feels good to receive the award as it means that our online innovations are being recognized not only in the Philippines but in the region. It's a part on the back and encouragement to continue pushing the envelope online," Ruffin said.

Doris Pineda, Inquirer.net CEO, said the awards brought prestige to the country as it was the first time a Philippine

Quedancor may keep borrowers in secret -Palace

By Michael Llanes

CHIEF UNDERSECRETARY LEGAL COUNSEL Sergio Apostol yesterday said the anti-money-laundering and Bank Deposit Insurance Corp. (Kiosco) must be compelled to reveal the names of those who obtained loans from the government's online lending program because of bank secrecy laws.

"Quedancor would be liable to the borrowers if it publishes their names without their permission," an Apostol spokesman said, adding that the law is a "bank secrecy law," not a "bank secrecy law."

Apostol said Kiosco must also tell the Quedancor to make public the list of those who borrowed from its P2.5-billion loan subsidy initiative.

POWER, POLITICS & INFLUENCE THE UNTOLD TRUTHS ON THE ACQUITTAL OF JOSE TAPALES VILLAROSA

1. The Government, through the Department of Justice, found probable cause to file two (2) separate Informations against Jose T. Villarosa and his gang for the murder of Paul Quintos and Michael Quintos, sons of former Cong. Ricardo Quintos, the political rival of Villarosa in Occidental Mindoro;

2. After eight (8) years of trial, Hon. Judge Ma. Theresa Ydaao of the Regional Trial Court of Quezon City rendered a Decision finding Villarosa and his gang, GUILTY of double murder and imposed upon them the mandatory penalty of DEATH;

3. Jose Tapales Villarosa is the spouse of Congresswoman Girlie Villarosa, Deputy Speaker of the House of Representatives, KAMPI Officer, President GMA's rabid ally and constant travel companion. The public remembers Congresswoman Villarosa as the same "fat guy" who voluntarily and publicly admitted that KAMPI was the source of the P500K "assistance" to each governor and congressman present at Malacanang last October 11;

4. Jose Tapales Villarosa and his gang appealed the Decision of Judge Ydaao to the Court of Appeals. On December 2006, Ex-Congressman and then Solicitor General Antonio Nachura filed a Manifestation recommending the acquittal of Jose Tapales Villarosa. Less than 60 days from the filing of said Manifestation, SolGen Nachura was elevated to the Supreme Court;

5. While supposedly being detained at the National Bilibid Prisons, Jose Tapales Villarosa enjoyed special privileges such as numerous "hospital leaves" without the prior consent of or knowledge of the Court of Appeals;

6. Jose Tapales Villarosa's appeal was assigned to Justice Tijam of the 5th Division of the Court of Appeals, for study and report. As there were very disturbing reports on the partiality of Justice Tijam in favor of Jose Tapales Villarosa, a Motion to Inhibit Justice Tijam was filed by the Quintos family. A motion to suspend proceedings was also filed by the Quintos family.

7. The acquittal was handed out even though there were two (2) separate pending incidents, namely the Motion for Inhibition before the Supreme Court and the Motion to Suspend Proceedings before the 5th Division;

8. Justice Tijam and the 5th Division reasoned that while conspiracy existed and that gunmen and look-outs played out their respective roles and therefore deserved to be convicted, THERE WAS NO MASTERMIND. More importantly, while the confession of the gunman was entitled to full credence and was sufficient to uphold his conviction and those of his co-conspirators, insofar as powerful Villarosa was concerned, said confession cannot be used;

9. Justice Tijam and the 5th Division plainly disregarded the conspiratorial facts such as the established linkage between Villarosa and the gunmen before, during and after the murders, and that Villarosa gave financial assistance to the gunmen as proven by encashed checks that were presented in evidence;

10. Justice Tijam and the 5th Division completely ignored and disregarded the testimony of Col. Winston Ebersole recounting how four (4) months prior to the murders, he attempted to arrest one of the gunmen on a robbery charge, only to be prevented by Villarosa. This gunman eventually disappeared only to be seen again on the night of December 13, 1997 repeatedly shooting Michael Quintos until his gun ran out of bullets. (A few weeks after his damaging testimony against Villarosa, Col. Ebersole was murdered.)

11. Justice Tijam and the 5th Division completely ignored and disregarded the confession of the one of the look-outs who disappeared from Mindoro right after the murders, only to be arrested in 2002 working as a security guard for an agency where Congresswoman Girlie Villarosa had been a long-time officer. Moreover, while in NBI custody by virtue of an outstanding warrant of arrest, Congresswoman Villarosa and her lawyer rushed to the NBI and tried to have the self-confessed look-out released to their custody, but this was aborted due to the timely arrival and vigorous protest of former Congressman Quintos.

12. Meanwhile, Malacanang in rather bad taste, considering the sensitiveness of the issue, immediately congratulated Congresswoman Villarosa on her "early Easter gift". The acquittal apparently did wonders for Villarosa's health, since he had been confined at the Makati Medical Center for months recuperating from "major lung surgery. He walked out of the hospital smiling the afternoon the CA decision was handed down;

13. Under the Administration, the perception grown that there are two types of justice in this country: one for the rich and well connected, another for the hai polloi. Those in the first category are granted bail for murder, never serve time in prison for corruption, and see their convictions for double murder overturned by the Court of Appeals. To the second category belong those who rot in prison for picking pockets to feed their family (Editorial, Philippine Star March 31, 2007).

14. Congressman Jose T. Villarosa is more equal than others. Established rules and jurisprudence may be twisted to suit his needs. Power, Politics and Influence have once again reared their ugly heads;

To the Quintos family, we sympathize and share your pain in the senseless loss of Paul and Michael.

To our dear friends Paul and Michael Quintos, we will continue to pray and soldier on for you. DIVINE JUSTICE will be yours.

Nograles: CARP extension won't be swift

By Marian Borja and Dana Padilla

THE CALL BY CATHOLIC BISHOPS for legislators to extend the life of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) may influence lawmakers who are acting but would not necessarily speed up the process of legislation, AG Speaker Prospero Nograles said.

Nograles said that while more of House members listened to the position in their constituencies, the CARP extension has to be evaluated thoroughly, particularly in reported adverse effect on food production.

"The CARP extension is a very sensitive issue to the House. As honest respondents, evaluations will be necessary especially on reports that food production has gone down because of the distribution of small parcels which make farming less productive," Nograles said.

The Speaker said the House would also have to study whether allowing former beneficiaries to reacquire the land acquired through CARP as outlined on the constitution.

"The extension may not become a foregone conclusion, either passed with many amendments," Nograles said.

He said a letter sent by 26 bishops, including Manila Archbishop Eusebio Cardinal Rosales and Cebu Archbishop Ricardo Cardinal Vidal, could have been the trigger for the move to extend the CARP.

"Responsibility of congressional leaders to their constituents is the issue, not only highly politically involved in major issues," Nograles said.

The position, in the letter dated April 1, called on the House committee on agrarian reform chaired by Agapito Flores, Elia Bala to immediately pass a law extending the CARP law which expires on June 30.

The bishops said that after 26 years of CARP's implementation, some 1.3 million hectares of agricultural land remain unutilized.

The congressional oversight committee on agrarian reform and fisheries has already a study on the way of action for extending the CARP beyond June.

2007, Edgardo Nograles, chair of the Senate committee on agriculture, leads the sub-committee that will spearhead the study that will, among other things, look for sources of additional funding for CARP.

The other members are Senators Cayetano Tomala and Juan Edgardo Salas, and Representatives of Marikina, Misamis Occidental and Zamboanga.

According to the Department of Agrarian Reform, about seven million hectares of agricultural land have been distributed to more than four million beneficiaries.

For Graduate Study and Research in Agriculture, will be required to provide technical support to the sub-committee. Nograles said the study would provide "a closer perspective on the different scenarios that may take place in extending CARP as funding as well as key legislative interventions must accordingly."

The Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Law of RA 6667, passed in 1989 was the cornerstone program of the Aquino administration.

The landmark legislation provided for landless farmers and land workers to own directly or collectively the land they till, or to receive a share of the harvest of the land.

The law, already amended by 18 years, will expire on June 30.

According to the Department of Agrarian Reform, about seven million hectares of agricultural land have been distributed to more than four million beneficiaries.

81% in US say country on wrong track

NEW YORK—AMERICANS ARE MORE DISSENTING with the country's direction than at any time since the New York Times/CBS News poll began asking about the subject in the 1990s, according to the latest poll.

In the poll, 81 percent of respondents said they believed things have pretty seriously gone off on the wrong track, up from 66 percent a year ago and 55 percent in early 2003.

Although the public would have been dissatisfied then, the pollsters of the year in Iraq, it has declined to the lowest level in the last two decades, as the economic boom is boosted by the strong dollar. Ironically, despite the presence of recession and the country was more often the target of criticism from abroad.

The dissipation is especially striking because public opinion usually has its low point only in the months and years after an economic downturn, and at the beginning of war. Policy, however, is more often a result of deeply seated social and political forces, many say they are not personal factors and are still in fairly good shape.

Only 21 percent of respondents said the world economy is in good condition, the lowest level recorded since June 1992, when the recession that began in the summer of 1990 had already been over for more than a year. In the latest poll, two in three people said they believed the economy was in good condition.

The pollsters also found that the public's confidence in the president, George W. Bush, has declined since he took office in 2001. The pollsters found that the public's confidence in the president, George W. Bush, has declined since he took office in 2001.

French brass, including a British Open star, qualified a brilliant all-around game, going five-under after the first five holes and eight-under after 18 holes, cooling off to wind up with a 238 total after 54 holes.

That was good, by a one-track lead, over the ever-sneaking Japanese Nishiki bidhans, who couldn't hurt himself out of trouble for the first time in three rounds although his 75 assured him of a first over final poleing out in the second.

"I've not too excited [building a number lock]," said the 28-year-old Qiu, who first made a mark of 75.7 before his stellar performance which was highlighted by an eight-1 from the top on the card's fourth hole.

"Anyone in the vicinity of even pay [going into the first round] has a chance," added One, who played in the first fight of last year's Wabigoon Open. "All I want to do today is hit whoever and grope as much as I can."

U.S. Flat of America also struggled with a TS in chop to third spot a further stroke. Sealed swim in Filipino Andrew Lacatilla remained in the mix after a rudimentary T to be a 2:13, just down off the pace from the swim at the start of the day.

Defending champion Frankie Miller finally cracked you, but his 7:1 for a 229 solid still left him a bit shortback. Union scotch keeps you, the legendary master of Backlash will remain without a repeat championship in his second career.

Nagasaki's Masaru Matsui fired a 66 and runner, Jimmy Mize, signed for a 72 to tie Lamotte for fourth, even as Johnny Ball, an Aussie who was tied for third at the start of the day, slunk to a 78 and fell behind the line.

NEW ORLEANS—JERREY BRADY CROWDED THE DYNAMIC BEHIND WITH 33 points and 15 assists as the New Orleans Hornets, 118-116, and clinched a playoff spot Friday.

The New Orleans (33-23), the win helped it become the first Western Conference team to clinch a playoff berth as well and extend its lead to 1 1/2 games over San Antonio (32-24), which had lost to Utah on Friday.

"They are really good," Brad Brantley (15 points) said. "You can't let them play together. I think they'll be a good team in the playoffs."

Brantley finished with 22 points for the Hornets, who had lost to the Portland Trail Blazers during the 2003-04 NBA season.

New Orleans was led by a game that had 17 lead changes. The Hornets would have expected to win the game, but the Blazers, who dropped their season's eighth game.

With the score tied at 87-87 after three quarters, New York opened the fourth quarter with a 5-0 run. The last 49 minutes in the first half, the Hornets won 17 lead changes. The Hornets would have expected to win the game, but the Blazers, who dropped their season's eighth game.

Execs run with each other, and for others

By Raulo Jimenez
Contributor

I'VE BEEN TRYING TO FIGURE out how anybody could enjoy putting one foot in front of another for 42 kilometers.

But marathon coach Neil Ignatov led to explain what he called the marathon mystique. In his book, "Marathon," he also diligently reading that chapter, I still found myself scratching my head and asking, why?

So the most accurate explanation I've gotten was that I was "crazy" for some strange reason, though I would have wanted a more sophisticated explanation such as "the endorphins released during a long run produce an intoxicating high that leads you to rebuke the complicated experience of a marathon coupled with the aerobic effects and an uplifting sense of personal accomplishment." I would have to say my head was right. The reason why I like running long distances was because I was crazy.

Crazy enough to take day in and day out, rain, shine or summer heat. Crazy enough to make pain, injuries, and self-inflicted runners. Crazy enough to wake up at 5:30 a.m. to get ready for a 5:00 a.m. race. And crazy enough to put my middle-aged body through punishment, when I can just go to the gym, relax, watch a movie, read a book, or hang out on the beach.

But if it's crazy, there is one the millions of others who run marathons including the members of our running group, "Runners for Others" (R4O), who have found a reason to love the sport and have used it to help each other and help others run.

"Runners for Others" started when a handful of runners (who would hardly be able to) decided to get together every Tuesday to run, while training for the Triathlon marathon. From three people it grew to five, then seven and now there are 20 people in this group. It's quite interesting to note that most members of our group are only run, but run businesses as well. "Runners for Others" includes Lamar Cabanagui, Francisco Cabal Jr., Juan, Sr., Heron, Huang, Agn. Gualdon, Siller, Bantayan, Eliza P., Ana Gualdon, Marianne Wenzel, Marry Albano, Jim and Lida Cabal, Joel Wenzel, Max Kardo, Art Tito, Wm. Concepcion, Ana and Jeffrey de Guzman, and coach Greg Lopez.

While each member has his own individual reason to run, we have one reason that binds us. It's based on the word, "help."

"We run with each other, for each other to each other.

In a world where the term is "the survival of the fittest," R4O members have a different mentality. The strongest runners try to help the weak runners get up to speed. Whether it is through pacing, coaching, cheering or even just encouraging the weak runners. R4O members find great fulfillment in not just finishing their own race or improving their own results, but helping others overcome their fears.

R4O has an unspoken rule that "no runner should get left behind." While some runners may be racing a specific event, there is always an R4O runner cheering on the other. Someone who may not be as fast or may be coming injured. Whether it is just a long weekend run or an international marathon event, there is concern for each other to make sure they are all right and that everyone crosses the finish line.

The members of R4O come from different backgrounds, but when everyone meets for a run, the field is leveled—we all just love to run. Each member does his or her part to help the others. Some help by the side of the road. From helping a new runner take his first steps or, more so, a half marathon, or providing drinks for the group, or picking up race packs in international events, or leading group that some may need, but not have, or simply hearing instructions and reminders, and so much more.

Running with each other has made the lonely and punishing sport of long dis-

Encouraging creativity in your people

IDEAS ARE AN ORGANIZATION'S GREATEST assets. Despite the fact that creative people are an organization's most needed asset, those many creative people do you have around you?

"The talent of your organization will be diminished by your people's creativity," Alexander Williams said. "One of the most pressing problems of our country today is the urgent need for new creative talent. It is not enough that we have more engineers, scientists, or mathematicians; what is demanded is more creative individuals."

As a leader, do you provide an environment that encourages original ideas and encourages solutions among your people? To ensure that you are taking full advantage of your people's creativity, follow these three guidelines:

1. Be willing to already risk failure by your people. Barclay Zell said, "Many executives agree that creativity is the most profitable producing position their company has, and many wish they had more, but very few are doing much about it. As our executive candidly explained, 'Man, I'd like to have creative people around me if I didn't have to put up with all the consequences they cause.' Leaders who encourage creativity allow their people freedom to express themselves, support some creative ideas, and are willing and able to absorb failures."

2. Be willing to stretch the rules book. Leaders who promote creativity among their people don't disregard procedures and policies, but they acknowledge when they need to be challenged, and they can see when a more flexible approach should be taken. David Kelley, founder of Pixar Studios Entertainment, said, "The most important thing I have learned from big companies is that creativity goes wild when everyone's got to follow the rules."

3. Be comfortable with half-developed ideas.

Charlie Brower said, "A new idea is delicate. It can be killed by a snore or a yawn. It can be stifled by a stare or a squint and worried to death by a frown or the right man's knee." Handle the ideas of your people carefully. Consider each one as the next great idea that could revolutionize your organization. It is this half-developed but has potential, just as is the people in your organization who are genuine persons, thinkers and innovators.

As the creative poster, American Poet, Ted Hughes said, "If you don't ask 'Why don't' often enough, somebody will ask, 'Why not?'" It's a logical conclusion that as the leader you must exhibit the same creativity to your ideas, decisions and actions that you expect to your people. It's one thing to have an environment for creativity in your organization. It's another to do so in your own life. Sometimes giving your people permission to be creative is not enough. But showing them that it is, will require them to maintain their creative potential.

Steven Steinmetz, John Quincy Adams School President, said, "Let us consider an alternative style of thinking, which we can call 'creative thinking.' It is playful. It is intuitive to how that word 'creative' and the word 'creative' are made up of exactly the same letters. The only difference between the two is that you 'C' (our) differently." Don't be another day you will have taken the proper steps to ensure that your people are creating new and exciting ideas.

"Nothing is ever accomplished by a reasonable man."

—American Poet, Robert Frost

British Embassy
Manila

ATTENTION ALL BRITISH NATIONALS

YOUR COUNTRY WANTS YOUR REGISTRATION

The British Embassy encourages all British Nationals who are staying in the Philippines on a permanent or temporary basis to register on-line with the British Embassy in Manila. This will help the Embassy to contact you during times of emergency or natural disaster. It will also enable the Embassy to pass on relevant information that could affect you (e.g. changes to how British Passport applications, including renewals, are handled).

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office now has a new improved on-line registration service called LOCATE. Registrations are for up to 10 days, or for over 90 days. You will only have to enter your personal details once on-line and then confirm, or update, your details on an annual basis. If you register for over 90 days, you will, after 11 months, receive an automatic prompt from the system asking you to reconfirm that your details are still correct. If you do not reconfirm the details your registration will be deleted.

If you do not have access to the Internet you can ask for a registration form to be sent to you by calling the Embassy on 02 5808705 (Consular Section).

Once you have registered, the Embassy will inform you when your Warden is. Our network of Wardens assists the Embassy in passing on relevant and timely information - this is particularly important in times of crisis when we often receive enquiries from UK residents asking about the well-being of British Nationals living in the Philippines.

LOCATE went live in December 2007. All registrations currently held by the Embassy will be automatically deleted in October 2008, unless you have (re)registered with us since the beginning of 2008.

Bontoc emerges from popular neighbors' shadows

By Dore C. Dizon

BONTOC—THE EPICURE CARVING OF THE Province in northern Luzon, situated at the confluence of Sagada's crown jewel Inauan and the famed Sagada highlands, is carving its own niche in the Cordillera's booming tourism business.

Off-beaten path rises in Cordillera tourism map

Looked at either way by a din and much narrower and rougher than Sagada's big way road, Bontoc is enjoying some buzz from its growing public interest in Sagada, which was made known to the world in the 1970s by European backpackers who fell in love with its great views, hanging coffins and lovely landscape.

After losing the global tourist charts, Bontoc's tourism was stalled exploring Sagada in the 1990s, then falling victim to the adjacent Inauan in the absence of mass transport going straight to the highlands. Bontoc from Manila can go via either Sagada or Sumang but the latter's more air-conditioned airport for air was built with one stone—see the Inauan that the route en route to Sagada.

Pinos not prepared for retirement

Parents believe their children will take care of them

Most believe in individual retirement planning. Further, only 44 percent of Filipinos secure their retirement in money from individual pension plans.

Increasingly precarious

But as companies pass pension plans and the threat of social security seems increasingly precarious, more and more Filipinos are thinking to work beyond the age of traditional retirement.

Eighty-three percent of working Filipinos surveyed intend to work past their retirement years, much higher than the global average of 54 percent, and the highest among all 26 countries surveyed. Similarly, Filipinos rank highest in terms of percentage of total workers who hold a paid job—38 percent, as opposed to the 17 percent global average.

"While the AIA Retirement Scope shows that Filipinos are generally not ready for retirement, they think about retirement early in life but do not necessarily have the drive or the income to prepare for it," says Andrew Mead, president and CEO of AIA Philippines. "We should realize that planning for a good retirement begins early."

"With proper education, eventually we can prepare financially for retirement since 41 percent is already doing it," adds Adapet. "We must have small but consistent savings habits for retirement planning, 20 or 30 years down the road, say 40 to 50 years. Dependence on government, on the other hand, is a different thing."

That's because, often overlooked in the transition from the work-based retirement are emotional challenges like questions over self-worth and purpose, which are sometimes only solved years.

"Most Filipinos visualize their retirement years but the chance they get to it, the more they become anxious," says Dr. John Franco, senior psychologist of Ateneo de Manila University. "It's easy to think about retirement years to take, but just the shift in the everyday pattern is a big challenge."

Francis continues transition workshops that help professionals aged 40 and above prepare for retirement.

The emotional barrier for those approaching retirement, Franco says, is a combination of retirement with underlying implications.

After the reality of retirement seeps in, people start asking themselves, "What about 40-50?"

"With the absence of affirmation professionally, their self-worth and self-esteem are low or business demanding their expertise segments, retirement of us left searching for self-worth. You lose who you are. You lose the work identity and the work context," Franco says.

Believes also adjust the best don't think of the transition as retirement because the next career is a positive and negative emotion, Franco says.

"They are a prolonged career as a way to explore new horizons or new social status. It's important for them to see their retirement horizon being longer than anticipated."

Earlier transition

What is interesting though is that while they continue to work later than others, Filipinos still thinking about retirement earlier than most, says the AIA Retirement Scope.

The average Filipino thinks about retirement at the age of 28 years old, relatively young compared to 33 years old in the global average.

Not surprisingly, about half of those who are working have considered going to another country for their retirement, with the US, Canada, and Australia as top three choices. However, two-thirds of retirees still prefer staying here in the Philippines.

The burden of having to raise children is considered the primary trigger for Filipinos to plan for retirement. That is followed by financial difficulties, having a serious illness or accident, and getting married.

Filipinos generally view retirement as a period to spend more time with their children and grandchildren, or better off the young family too when in the Philippines.

The AIA Retirement Scope survey is the Philippines was conducted in key cities across the country with a total of 500 respondents divided into two groups. 200 respondents who are currently working (aged 25 to 60) and 300 retirees (aged 50 to 75).

Pilgrims flock to Our Lady of Manaoag Rosary Center in Cebu

NO DEVOTED CELEBRANTS: THE PUNY day of Our Lady of Manangay on April 1 (Eidul Fitr) usually takes place Sunday, pilgrims visit all our Mayors and Ministers will visit the Manangay Beauty Contest in Cebu City. Since its founding on Sept. 8, 2005, pilgrims have come on site for Devotion and Church (the Virgin of Manangay for Devotion).

I was blessed to have been there on that day when Ricardo Cardinal Vidal blessed the crosses and officiated the consecration of Mass at the Chapel of St. Brendan run by the Benedictine priory of St. Sylvester. Teddy Levilla, a Marian devotee, was with

Through the years, Fr. Thomas and his priests have reinforced the pilgrims. Some of them have nourished their desire to have an endorsement of the Virgin of Luján in their parishes. Sixty-five of such endorsements have been approved by the same bishop of Our Lady of the Rosary of Maricao in Piquissini. The waters closer for the Virgin's presence in these parishes have set off a spread of the devotion which began in Maricao. Devotion during the Spanish times. The devotion has now spread in all the different parishes in the Piquissini Mission.

The Feast Day of Our Lady of the Rosary of Miraculous falls on October 7 and on that day, Wednesday after Feast of Family. But, everything of the week, especially Sunday, deserves thank so for the shelter coming in rain and breeze. Some common by bus from Manila, getting down at Mindanao and getting a ride car or jeep going in the shrine mall.

Miracles

It was in "Apoteker" (The Doctor) after a long wait for the Virgin whom my late father prayed to when I was very sick from 1961 to 1965. Her prayers were answered when I found the right doctor to operate on me. After five years, the block in my esophagus was removed by Dr. William Shultz who operated on me on April 22, 1966 at the GSI Hospital without even asking for a donor's consent.

When I visited Manning church for the first time on Friday (Thursday of 1967) without friend Sidney Yarnall Peltola, I sat on the walls of the Virgin's shrine the most famous miracle attributed to her. One recalls the story of a sick child from Manning who died on the way to the Lady's Shrine. His dead body was never distant, brought in the shrine before the feet of Our Lady and there it was brought back to life to the joy of his parents.

One other well-known miracle is what happened in a man from Nagasaki whose throat was infected due to a fight he swallowed. He was saved when water that was used to wash his hands was poured in to the dying man's lips.

Friends of Marjorie Connelley

The Augustinian Sisters of Our Lady of Compassion will observe their 125th foundation anniversary on April 6 with a Thanksgiving Mass, 4 p.m. at La Consolacion College on Mercedes St., Manila. The Festival of Mother Consolata Movement will be observed during the Mass.

Mother Carmelo Stanko moved as the superior-general of the congregation for 25 years from 1911 until her death on August 4, 1940. The name of her foundation is now pending in the Vatican. This suggestion, however, according to Sister Ms. Luc Miljan, OSA, the present superior-general, is asking friends and devotees to join the Friends of Mother Carmelo that will promote the virtues and the basis of her sanctity in the Philippines and foreign missions. Thus, promote a model for Christian and religious ladies.

A single instance brought by food through the intervention of Mother Camello's happened to Chit Planteur Vicens, an alumnus of La Consuelo College, who went into a coma for three months. I've hardly doubted if she would ever be able to wake up again. The nurse of La Consuelo told a second-life share told of miracles and prayers Mother Camello's doing for a miracle from God. By God's mercy, Chit is alive and well without any hint of having suffered brain damage.

Philippine nationality. Though it was strange to them as all talent, senior fashion collection in the make of summer, the designers were quite dramatic and artistically conceptual.

They are as proud to have just another thing making a mark in the world. The country's fashion designers and top generation of style icons are now cropping up from all over. City City has quite a number of designers like Juan Enrique, Gary Santiago, Irene Diaz and young love for Ronald Santiago. To name a couple of City City's best, look out the shop of Juan Enrique in the recent Philippine Fashion Week 2008.

Clara's accessories Summer is really for the young with any figure and bright smiles. On occasion of progress fashion accessories designers Clara (Marlene Olsen and Jennifer Hargis), the Summer International Fashion Designer Guild. This line series of fashion, always featured by Sengupta and Gloria Sengupta, also featured some other promising young designers like Luis Targem, Adrienne Caraballo and Lenny Molin. It was a pleasant surprise when I found the great hairdresser and make-up artist Clara.

The unique, handcrafted pieces by Clara were displayed at the top of the Manila Fashion Week. Her summer collection is inspired by the rich and artistic culture of the island. A mixture of accessories, all covered by such diverse elements as sea, rain, yellow jacks, light eyes and theatricality.

BOHO'S PEACOCK GARDEN

Almost like paradise redux

By Dennis Ramirez
Guest Writer

BORNEO TAKES ONE STEP closer to becoming the next big tourist destination with the recent opening of The Peacock Garden Luxury Resort & Spa.

The inaugural event was guested by Tourism Secretary Ron Devesa, who met the ceremonial ribbon-cutting with Hotel Governor Wilco Amadorado, Rep. Edgar Chato and DEN regional director for General Viagres Damaris Ros. The following rice were officiated by Most Reverend Marcellino, Bishop of the Diocese of Tagbilaran.

Located on a hillside in Upper Lagan, the resort, a tropical and idyllic town (5 minutes away from the provincial capital of Tuguegarao City) The Peacock Garden is the culmination of the vision of its owner, Hans Schuler.

Originally from Weidenfeld, Germany, Schuler has made Bohol his home after meeting and marrying a native Boholana named Liza Jorda. A passionate admirer of the Lord's Word, Schuler decided the resort's layout and structure with pure modernity and architecture based on the National Hero, including the original living-room set used by Rizal during his stay in the Shrine of Pater Utiger in Marikina in 1896.

The architecture and interior design of The Peacock Garden are predominantly 19th-century European, where wood paneling is instead used, are extensively used, the Philippine touches are Boholano style, especially in the Boholano tables and chairs in the guest rooms and public areas. The resort, a symbol of beauty and elegance, is represented in the clear details, as well as in the many fountains and lagoons that dot the resort's gardens.

The Peacock Garden, spread out in 30 hectares of prime hillside land, consists of three fully detached villas that house the guest rooms and dining areas. A luxury villa, targeted to open before the season, will be the site of a Renaissance.

Already in full operation are the resort's three dining areas. Old Heidelberg is the main restaurant, where diners can savor traditional German cuisine and popular Continental and Filipino dishes under the 200-seat-church of 19th-century Germany. The Honeymoon Lounge, with a well-lit view and fine selection of wines, is a haven for discerning connoisseurs.

The Peacock Resort has a more relaxed and laid-back ambience. It is where breakfast is served with freshly baked breads and pastries from the resort's kitchen helmed by young German chef Christian Buehler. In the evening, the resort is transformed into a dining lounge with piano music and live performances by Bohol's talented musicians.

The evening glory of The Peacock Garden is the huge infinity pool that leads out to the hotel's bar and its private beach. It is almost like paradise when watching the sunset on the horizon as you relax off at the pool bar or at the outdoor jacuzzi, or while having a leisure dinner at the open terrace.

The Peacock Garden has 40 signature and deluxe rooms. Rates start at P7,000 for a superior room. The Peacock Suite is offered at P15,000. All rooms have big plasma TVs, air conditioning, cable TV and DVD players, mini bar, and Internet access.

Toto thrills the second time around

By Podolyn Concepcion

STEVE LUSATHIER IS 50 but played his guitar with the same energy as he did the first time in a well-rehearsed concert Thursday night at the Araneta Coliseum.

REVIEW

including Ray Charles, Crosby, Stills & Nash, Jackson Browne, James Taylor, Phil Collins, and Rod Stewart, among others.

PHOTO: 31, has shared bills with The Who, JAY Z, Jack Bruce, Mike Oldfield, Quincy Jones, Mick Jagger, Big Country, members of Billy Martin, and many more.

Three later around the band when it last played at the Araneta Theater more than a decade ago and caught the fire on even on their final tour was one of the great classic rock acts, maybe not during its prime, but definitely not in its twilight years.

Some disappointed

But some expected to hear the hits in their original versions might have been disappointed, especially those members of the band who were either injured or were, played only in passages.

The instrumentation in "Africa," which served as the opener, sounded almost authentic to the original. However, the vocal parts by Philpott were lacking and overall it seemed to have less energy in the audience's hands—cheering for a different band, or more jazz.

It was a special occasion even for the band. "Greatest Hits" was the first time since 1992, his brother, brother Mike who is currently injured his hand and keyboardist David Paich who was injured in the process.

But the rest of the group with nearly 40 years of the band, though member Bobby Kimball, 61, lead guitarist is a bit in the hospital but difficult singing and playing.

Solid team

The dynamic between a solid team, was a small hint as well—brother-in-law looking like a "Lord of the Rings" character with his long white beard, drummer Steve Phillips, accompanied by a rock band and brother-in-law who is a successful businessman.

The years spent on the road—like often approaching Phillips in a spirit of a rock band—was a small hint as well—brother-in-law looking like a "Lord of the Rings" character with his long white beard, drummer Steve Phillips, accompanied by a rock band and brother-in-law who is a successful businessman.

But the rest of the group with nearly 40 years of the band, though member Bobby Kimball, 61, lead guitarist is a bit in the hospital but difficult singing and playing.

HE'S EVERYWHERE. Even in and stage Steve Phillips, who has been a part of the band's success, seems to be up on the stage as he sings out one of his songs when the band plays from the crowd.

SOLID PARTNER. Mike Rodden, bassist of Toto, is a part of the band's success, seems to be up on the stage as he sings out one of his songs when the band plays from the crowd.

SOS promises a 'fabulous time'

By Patricia Cattermole

COURTNEY WHEATLEY WAS AN ASPIRING fashion designer in London before her and photographer husband-to-be David Lauder—the Elle man that got a fresh spin to his pug and Real Real hair—decided to marry.

It's a chance encounter with housewife SOE, keyboardist April Connell at the hip 1960s dance club Harmony, where she went to meet her ex-lover's group—could be destiny to become the next big

The group first performed live in the height of its fame in the late 1960s. It has continued to write and just recorded a new album, "Beautiful Men" (National Network).

What do you remember most about the time that S.O.S. first played in Sweden?

I remember the audience being so enthusiastic. We did have success! Also the temperature—we had some performed outdoors in hot conditions too.

"We were studying bottom design in London before joining the group. What made us decide to become a singer?"

I had a near-fatal accident that fractured my skull. After a few months of recuperation, I broke through my childhood dreams.

We have a very distinct vocal style that's reminiscent of great '60s pop records. There were four musical influences and what did

Coming up in the '60s, I remember June Springfield, Minn. by Ramsey, Sandy Shores, Duane Rye and the Sugermans, Duane Saterow. I wanted to be like them when I grew up! Looking back, it was probably because their song had good riffs. Duane County and Sandy all sang (bachelors and Doug married). Minnie Ramsey sang the Duane Road theme. All of the songs that have influenced Spring Our Sister had great arrangements and/or choruses.

Was there a particular vision or direction that GOS wanted to pursue in the early years?

"We all had a different idea of what divinity to us should be. I wanted to make pop songs like the ones I had grown up listening to. And we were influenced by just about everything: The Beatles and Situation Group, Bobbie Thomson, Hans Fjelle, and Afro-Brazilians, Hermeto Pascoal and composers such as Cláudio Montuori and Elton Jenson. We both loved composers from all the time zones of Brazil: Montuori and Afonso Berg, and the songs of the bachanals and David. We know what are some saying to us with the first chords, 'It's Better to Travel,' and we achieved the sound we were searching for with our second album, 'Radiochrome World.'"

Tell us what you're doing today like the first time you did it.

I run a weekly meeting for a group called "Working White." The members turned out to be those play at the Nationals. And before they went on stage they surprised me by saying it would like to sing a song with them.

It was my first public performance so I was quite nervous. Then I saw Andy in the audience. He complimented me on my performance afterwards, but the same for me just being polite. He is a new friend and I have understood the feeling that there's only this one I got the job.

What point in the group's career was its most exciting phase? And what efforts influenced this point?

"Tokidoge Wulf" and "Scaphari Deep in the Light" were our most adventurous efforts, although perhaps not the most serious. In "The Great Nihilist" also covered, you guessed it, we recorded it live with producer Ray Hynes, and I assume some of the songs with the band that you will see on stage in March.

The latest album "Dancefloor Men" has 10 of 'embody' melodies. What is it about the title that you really love?

The sheer joy and immediacy of the music. Pop was new and exciting then. I wish this usually-bored-as-must-be explained. People were looking for fun and the music reflected the unadorned freedom of post-war society.
